Merchandising Guide

The Summerfruit Merchandising Guide is aimed to give you and your team everything you need to know to have a successful Summerfruit selling season. From storage, through handling and presentation on shelf, there is a lot you can do to ensure Summerfruit produce quality and presentation is maintained.

The Summerfruit Consumer

-  Consumers love that Summerfruits are refreshingly light, tasty, and convenient to eat.
-  Increasingly, consumers are adding Summerfruits to their salads, entertaining platters, and BBQ's, adding sweetness and flavour – suggest these usage ideas to your customers.
-  60% of purchases are spontaneous; ensure displays are prominent and filled across all hours of trade to boost sales throughout season.
-  Shoppers enjoy trying different varieties; display the full range together to encourage trial.

Display and Merchandising

Merchandising Summerfruit

Shoppers' purchasing decisions are strongly influenced by Summerfruit quality and presentation. Well-stocked shelves with ripe, high-quality fruit, attracts buyers and drive sales, while poor presentation, low stock, or below standard quality can deter purchase. Consistently applying best merchandising practices, ensures your store maintains standards that encourage shoppers to buy more Summerfruit, more often.

Storage

Storage conditions are vitally important to Summerfruit to manage quality and ripening

 Summerfruit should be transported between 0-2°C

 On receipt, Summerfruit should be stored in the cool room

 Fruit is best displayed at ambient where it will naturally begin to ripen

 Fruit will stay fresh and ready-to-eat at ambient

 Avoid moving fruit in and out of coolstore as this will impact quality

Care and handling

- Always handle with care, even firm fruit can bruise easily
- Handle and display the Summerfruit in the trays and cartons they arrive in
- Never tip fill

Fruit Quality & Ripeness

- Shoppers want Summerfruit at the correct ripeness—if it's not, they may not buy it
- After leaving the cool room, fruit begins to ripen, staying fresh and ready to eat. Stock rotation is important.
- A poor experience can discourage shoppers from purchasing again

Display

- Always handle Summerfruits with care, even firm fruit can bruise easily
- Never tip fill
- Keep fruit in original trays or cartons to reduce handling and over stacking
- Ensure displays are full and fresh — low stock can deter shoppers
- Display at ambient temperature
- Rotate your stock on display – first in, first out principles
- Remove damaged, wrinkled or mouldy fruit from display
- Keep the display areas clean and tidy
- Price tickets are essential for shoppers
- Signage and POS are helpful to direct shoppers and bring attention to the category

Increasing Demand for Summerfruit

Australians purchase approx. 900g of Summerfruit per shop, encourage shoppers to buy more each time

67% of Australian Households purchase Summerfruit, with growth potential among young adults

Australians purchase Summerfruit on avg. 8.8 times per annum, that's about every 2.5 weeks, 1 extra purchase will have a big impact on sales
